LIFE SCIENCE IN THE GREATER COPENHAGEN REGION

Life science is a strong sector in Greater Copenhagen Region – the cross-border region of Eastern Denmark and Southern Sweden. The region is world leading in R&D spending, clinical testing and drug development. It is also Northern Europe's hub for pharma logistics and supply chain, due to excellent infrastructure with easy access to Europe and the rest of the world.

Greater Copenhagen Region is the home of Medicon Valley, one of Europe's leading life science clusters, spanning eastern Denmark and southern Sweden. The area, with a population close to 4 million, includes 17 universities, 32 hospitals and more than 580 life science companies. Medicon Valley provides access to an ecosystem with cutting edge research facilities, a strong life science industry – and a highly educated population with English as their second language.
